

Northwest Youth Corps – Twin Rivers Charter School

Mathematics Lead Teacher Description

Twin Rivers Charter School

Northwest Youth Corps' (NYC) Twin Rivers Charter School (TRCS) is an accredited charter high school for youth, ages 14-19, who learn best in an experiential format and who may have had difficulty navigating in a traditional school environment. TRCS employs a cooperative, team-based format, in which staff engage students in hands-on learning that combines classroom instruction with the completion of conservation projects, field study assignments, and outdoor recreation activities. Students spend equal amounts of time in and out of the classroom and staff create conservation projects that are complementary and integrated. School curricula include science, math, language arts and social studies with an emphasis on resource management, conservation and environmental studies. Students earn high school credit toward a traditional diploma.

Job Description

NYC's Twin Rivers Charter School offers a unique opportunity for high energy teachers with vision and creativity to develop cutting edge lessons that integrate classroom and field experiences. Teachers use the outdoors as an instructional vehicle in order to lead students to high school completion while also fostering character and environmental awareness. The classroom content lays a foundation for a week of hands-on field study activates and conservation work experience. The students then apply that foundational content to the field. Therefore, teachers plan their in-house curricular to complement the field curricular experience. Teachers also plan and facilitate residential "spikes." Spikes are camping trips that combine fun, education, community, conservation work, and teambuilding.
